SYRIAN FEMALE JOURNALISTS NETWORK - FEMINIST MEDIA FOR SOCIAL CHANGE

During this interactive session, we will talk about the importance of inclusive and decolonial media coverage in promoting the Women Peace and Security agenda. We will present findings from the SFJN work in regard to gender, conflict, and media coverage, as well as discuss examples of international media portrayal and its effects on social perceptions, from Syria and other contexts.

MERCY CORPS - RESTORATIVE JUSTICE AND TRAUMA-INFORMED AND GENDER-SENSITIVE PEACEBUILDING

The starting point of the session are the findings of a recent research of Mercy Corps: Understanding social acceptance of returnees after displacement - Experimental evidence from post-ISIS Iraq. Based on the background of the research we aim to spark a conversation on the need for restorative justice and trauma-informed gender sensitive peacebuilding. The session also aims to discuss durable solutions and inspire further research.

MENSEN MET EEN MISSIE - WOMEN, LOCALLY LED PEACEBUILDING AND RELIGION

Conservative religious narratives are backlashing women's rights and achievements. Simultaneously, for many women (and men), religion constitutes a social and connecting power, a source of inspiration to bring about change. How can we work on local peace building and further the WPS agenda from feminist and faith-based perspectives? This session aims to share experiences, practices and insights from local women of faith, feminist theologians and local leaders from different regional contexts related to WPS; and start exploring the role of religion in our work.
